

The Triumph of the Dishonorable

27 May 11

This is just a short note to point out how those who themselves have no Honor can use that human quality against those who are in deed honorable. The links of the chains which will entrap and hold the honorable as slave to the dishonorable are found in an honorable person's sense of duty to discharge his debts.

The dishonorable Bankers and the powers behind them can create Money with the wave of their magic wands – pen to paper in the form of Bank Notes, and more recently keystrokes on a computer keyboard, creating Credits here and Debits there. They then induce the innocent to borrow some of that easy money to help make life easier. Those innocent are common folk (sometimes whole Nations) who then feel obliged to repay the borrowed funds. And an important point must be made here: they feel obliged to repay what they borrowed not just because they have a contractual duty to do so – and fear the Law – but because they have the Human Decency to do what is right; it is in their Human Nature to pay back what they feel they owe.

People are basically good – they don't want to steal from others. But some people are not so good. They seek to steal; they are Criminals. Criminals have taken control of the creation of Money, and they use that control to trick the innocent into enslaving themselves. Criminals create the shadow of Wealth, and get the innocent to think they are borrowing real Wealth. Once they are satisfied that enough of the innocent are in their debt, the Criminals disappear that apparent Wealth as easily as they made it appear, and then insist that the innocent pay it back. It never really existed, but the innocent think that it did, and because they are good people, they will struggle to repay it.

Here we have in a nutshell the basic strategy of the One Worlders, in their criminal enslavement of Man.
